

JOB SEARCH SITES

The internet provides a vast resource of information relating to job searching. In order to make effective use of these resources an organized and disciplined approach to your job search is appropriate. While job leads are necessary, the fact remains that networking and personal contacts are the most effective path to a job interview and ultimately an offer. Using the internet to identify available job openings and then using networking to get an inside track can provide a powerful search strategy.

The following compilation of sites was prepared by Karla Nuzman, Employment Specialist. It presents an extensive set of site addresses broken into useful career categories.

Click on any desired category for a list of pertinent site links, to return to this page click on the upper right Categories link.
